But no other nation has used them so adroitly and to better effect in influencing the thinking of impressionable young adults than the USA. Those published during the 1950s “Red Menace” scare deserve particular study. Cold War comics reveal how effective this seemingly simple Art form could be when used for outright propaganda.

The Comics Code Authority (CCA) was formed in 1954 by the Comics Magazine Association of America as an alternative to government regulation. The CCA allowed the comic publishers to self-regulate the content of comic books in the United States. The code was voluntary; there was no law requiring its use, although some advertisers and retailers looked to it for reassurance.

Comic Books and the Cold War, 1946-1962 - McFarland

It is from when I was a sophomore in high school, when much was beginning to change in the Cold War. This is one year before the collapse of the USSR and Glasnost was a buzz word. This comic is an allegory of old VS new, die-hard soviets/Marxists VS Americans in the waning years of the Cold War. Dosynski stands in for the old guard Soviets who, understandably so, were not happy with the perceived caving in of the Soviet government.

Polar: Came From The Cold owes a heavy nod to Frank Miller's Sin City: a noirish cold-war era type of spy thriller drawn in two color black and red, with femme fatales and evil villains, hard bitten heroes and a lot of atmosphere. Expect bright red lips or hair on heavy blocky black illustrations and you get the idea of the style.
